

The Olympic Games Chronicles of Legacy and Triumph

Raphael Buchmüller - University of Konstanz

The Olympic Games are a profound tradition that bridges sport and culture, with a legacy stretching back over 2,000 years. From their origins in Ancient Greece, the Games have evolved into a global celebration of athletic excellence and international unity. Our visualization highlights the European countries' rich history in the Olympics, showcasing their medal achievements displayed as a line glyph. Each ring represents an Olympic event, spanning from 1896 to 2020 beginning from the middle. The countries are arranged by the sports in which they have excelled. Our visualization enables to explore dynamic, geopolitical developments and common trends in sports and gender distribution. We aim to raise awareness to unity through competition underscoring the timeless connection between history and sport.

Europe
Edition

Athletics ■ ■ Racquet
Boating ■ ■ Shooting
Equestrian ■ ■ Swimming
Fighting ■ ■ Teams
Gymnastics ■ ■ Other

female ♀ male

Fighters of the Black Sea

Countries bordering the Black Sea, have produced some of the fiercest fighters in Olympic history. Georgian judo fighter Lasha Bekauri and Turkish boxer Basmal Surmeneli, gold medalist at Tokyo 2020, highlight the region's dominance in the ring and on the mat following deep-seated tradition of martial arts in the Black Sea region.

Soviet Legacy and Olympic Controversies

The Olympic participation of the Soviet Union and countries such as Russia, Yugoslavia, or Ukraine highlight the region's turbulent geopolitical history: the Soviet Union's strong presence until its dissolution in 1991, after which multiple countries emerged as separate entities; Yugoslavia's breakup in the 1990s led to the independent participation of its former republics, while Russia faced exclusion in 2020 due to doping scandals and in 2024 due to its war against Ukraine.

Empowering Women in Sports

The participation of female athletes in the Olympic Games has flourished over the years, celebrating the strides towards gender equality in sports. Beginning with just 22 women in 1900, such as Yvonne Prévost, the positive development is seen in countries such as Italy, Sweden, Great Britain, and France. A remarkable milestone was the 2012 London Olympics, where every participating country included female athletes.

Larisa Latynina

from the Soviet Union, dazzled the world by winning 18 Olympic medals in gymnastics during the 1956, 1960, and 1964 Games, making her the most successful European athlete in Olympic history.

Germany's Olympic Journey from Division to Unity

Germany's participation in the Olympic Games has been marked by significant historical events and transitions. Prior to World War II, Germany hosted the 1936 Berlin Olympics, a highly politicized event under Nazi rule. After the war, Germany was divided into East Germany (DDR) and West Germany (FRG), both participating separately in the Olympics from 1968 to 1988. East Germany emerged as a sporting powerhouse during this period, excelling particularly in disciplines like athletics and swimming. Following the fall of the Berlin Wall and the reunification of Germany in 1990, the country competed as a unified team once again, continuing to be a participant in various Olympic sports.

Germany's Olympic Journey from Division to Unity

Countries like Norway, Denmark, Germany, and the Netherlands, with their extensive coastlines, have shown strong performances in Olympic boating events. Norway's athletes have excelled in sailing, leveraging their fjord-filled geography. Denmark has a strong tradition in rowing, with athletes consistently achieving top ranks. The Netherlands has a history of sailing and rowing triumphs, supported by their rich maritime culture. The displayed trends highlight the influence of geography on their Olympic successes.

1) Larisa Latynina, olympics.com/en/news/latynina-signs-off-with-six-gymnastics-medals
2) Yvonne Prévost, www.olympedia.org/athletes/2458
3) Winnerboat Lerina at the 1900 Olympic Games photography, reproduction, de.wikipedia.org/wiki/Hermann_de_Pourtal%C3%A8s#/media/Datei:Lerina_1900.jpg

